The Worcester Carpenters union has started to tell local community leaders and elected officials that it has filed an unfair labor practice complaint with the National Labor Relations Board against P&B Partitions.

P&B Partitions is the New Jersey-based contractor performing work at the 145 Front Street at City Square project in downtown Worcester.

The Complaint

The complaint alleges that P&B violated federal labor law when it fired a carpenter for trying to improve the working conditions of the company's employees working on the project.

According to a spokesperson for the Worcester-based Carpenters union, the former P&B employee had been speaking with union organizers about concerns he had involving unsafe working conditions and wage and hour violations on the project.

Under the National Labor Relations Act, every worker has the right to advocate for basic rights on the job.
